

PLATE CAMP FOR CITIZEN ARMY ALL OVER COUNTRY

Pressure of Public Opinion
for Military Instruction
Proves Irresistible.

SITES BEING SELECTED.

Plans Are Under Way for
New Camp at Plattsburg in September.

Should Have a Staff of the Citizen Army.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Aug. 21.—The grip of the ideals established by the business and professional men's military training camp had results to-day which were startling to those who learned for the first time what was going on. The pressure of the high grade of public opinion represented in the present camp, the unending and unrelenting stream of applications from outside from other business and professional men who wish military training, not next year or at an indefinite time, but now, is working results.

If the tentative plans now under consideration are carried out there will be this fall (not next year) training camps like this in California, in Wisconsin or at Fort Sheridan, near Chicago, somewhere in Missouri, and in Connecticut. Telegrams and messages are flying to all these places to find if suitable sites can be used and if equipment can be supplied in time to make the camps effective. These four new camps will be additional to the September camp here, for which 750 applications have already been received.

As the prospects have shaped themselves, the Missouri camp—which is not altogether assured—will be at Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis. The California camp will be at the Presidio at San Francisco or at San Diego. The Connecticut camp will be at Quonset Point, from which a squadron of the regular Second Cavalry arrived here last night to participate in next week's manoeuvres.

MARTIAL ARDOR FIRED BY THE ARABIC TORPEDOING.

Though nobody in authority will say so, the sudden development of the arrangements for these new training schools for citizen-soldiers are in no small part due to the impression made on the country generally, and especially upon the representative men gathered here, by the sinking of the Arabic returning from England with American prisoners of war.

The effect of the first news from The Evening World, that it was not certain any American lives were lost, was quieting. In the groups about the day entrance of the torpedoes were not quite so angry. But as the day went on indignation began to grow again.

"What difference does it make," said one Wall Street lawyer, "whether they killed two Americans or tried to kill thirty-two?" And immediately the reporter was surrounded in hearing and put in force the camp regulation which forbids the newspaper quotation of any member of the camp unless he specifically authorizes the publication.

The telegrams which have come to-day and yesterday to Gen. Wood and the civilian military men, the encouragement and public influence, have made the greatly amplified scale of training possible. Men are at work in the War Department and the department headquarters all over the country drawing up plans and specifications. It is altogether likely that between now and Monday every man here will be invited to write to five or more of his friends describing his own feelings over his experiences here and asking these friends to try the same experience in one of the five September camps.

The plans for the Connecticut camp are not so well defined as the others, though it was a Connecticut man, Frank S. Butterworth of New Haven, who came here first, full of the assurance that his State would be the first to back up every measure that the officers of the army thought practicable.

REGULARS "SURPRISE" STUDENTS IN SHAM BATTLE.

The state of mind of the camp to-day is half humorously described by even its most enthusiastic members as "peevish." As on every other day since Tuesday a week ago, a lot of sweating, hard-breathing work has been done. The few men to whom the unusual exposure and unfamiliarity with methods of counteracting it have brought snuffling colds, are still sure their packs and blanket rolls are growing lighter every day.

But that Arabic matter was in every body's mind. Invariably reporters who approached the citizen soldiers (and nearly every one of the 1,375 was approached) with the question, "What do you think of the Arabic?" fairly shouted reporters away, though they

WHAT EVERY WOMAN SHOULD KNOW! How to Keep Well, Keep Strong and Keep a Perfect Figure, Told in a Series of Illustrated Lessons

A New Series of Illustrated Lessons, Giving Tests of Difficult Exercises Presented in Previous Lessons and Explaining the Physical Benefits Derived Therefrom.

TEST EXERCISE NO. XII—TRUNK TWISTING.

By Pauline Furlong.

The Evening World's Authority on All Questions of Women's Physical Well Being.

In the very first week of our course on how to keep well, keep strong and keep a perfect figure I made a prophecy. This is it: "You will be surprised and pleased" (I said), "to notice the glow in which your health work leaves you after you have been doing it a few days. Soon, if you jump out of bed in a very cold room and commence one of the simple exercises while still shivering, you will find yourself with pink cheeks and tingling flesh before you have repeated the exercise fifty times."

"After all, I believe you will find that what seems like arduous work in the beginning promptly becomes a fascinating habit. I have reached the point, personally, where I should be acutely uncomfortable if I tried to do without my exercises. It will be so with you. What appears tedious labor when you start will make such a vast difference in your appearance and health that you will continue the course to see just how good Nature really meant to be to all of us."

And in one of the most interesting letters that I have received I find that my prophecy has come true for at least one of you. The writer signs herself, "Your conscientious pupil, Mrs. W. S.," and she says:

My Dear Miss Furlong—I have been following your lessons since the series began, and have derived great benefit from them. At first I began them without enthusiasm, and I must admit, was a bit sceptical as to results. Now I would not think of going to bed without at least ten minutes' exercise, and I actually look forward to it. I never thought that I could enjoy systematic exercising, but you have made everything so plain by the way you explain, and by your illustrations, that what at first seemed to be an irksome duty soon became a pleasure.

I am a stenographer, and do not get any exercise. I was really very badly in need of a course like yours, but did not know how to obtain it. I want to thank you for the great help your lessons have been to me.

Although I am pleased by such a message, I am not really surprised. I know too well the clean, keen physical exhilaration of ten minutes of carefully planned muscle drill, which makes you breathe deeply and rhythmically, sends the blood coursing rapidly through your body and is a better tonic and appetizer than any medicine or cocktail.

TEST FOR TRUNK TWISTING WITH WAND.

To-day the test is for the trunk-twisting exercise with a wand. In this movement assume the normal standing position, with the abdomen in the chest up, the shoulders back and the head up. Your arms are stretched out in front of you at shoulder height, and the wand is held horizontally, parallel to the floor. The palms of the hands are down.

Without moving the feet, turn the upper part of the body as far as possible to the left, meanwhile taking a deep breath, and letting your arms and the wand follow the direction of your torso. Turn back to the front position, exhaling.

With your next long breath turn the upper trunk toward the right as far as you can easily do so, then twist back to centre while you exhale. There should be no pauses between the movements until at least ten have been completed, five to the left and five to the right in alternation.

have been affable and enthusiastically communicative heretofore. On the instances of the earnestness of the practical side of the work in the camp were multiplied to-day. Capt. Kelly of A Company was bringing his command from the rifle range down the mile road to the camp in open scouting formation. They overcame the brush and rough fields on either side of the road. A battalion of the regular Thirtieth Infantry was working at open order drill in the woods near their camp, just north of the instruction camp, far away from the road. The Commander of the regulars, Lieut. Col. O'Neill, sent word by an orderly to Capt. Kelly: "I am going to attack those school children of yours," or words to that effect.

"Wait a minute," replied the Captain, "let it be a real surprise." He gathered his men and began to put them, all unsuspecting, through practice in folding and laying out their field equipment. Then he sent word to Lieut. Col. O'Neill to come on. It was a lively engagement while it lasted. In spite of the handicap of being a skeleton battalion and rather less in size and inferior in equipment to the volunteer outfit, the regulars by their reasoning were able to take cover and move about rapidly with such good effect that most of the volunteers were ready to admit defeat later. No blank cartridges were fired, but rifle locks snapped vigorously, and the constant irregular rattle of the training rifles was heard far away under the night exciting and realistic while it lasted.

Willard D. Straight, banker and financial writer of the Orient, won first lieutenantcy to-day. He had to prove his right to it by leading a platoon in extended order through the woods between Valley and Flatbush. His promotion made room for C. F. Ahnert to be set up to the rank of sergeant. In many, if not all, of the student companies there will be two lieutenants appointed so that the camp may accomplish its purpose by training as many men as possible in the actual duties of commissioned officers.

PAULINE FURLONG

Remember not to move your feet during the entire exercise. You will lose all the good of it if you do not keep your feet and knees absolutely straight, restricting all movement to the portion of the body above the waist.

As you must see, this is fine drill for those dormant waist muscles, which hardly move even when you stoop to pick something from the floor if you are wearing a corset. The exercise is one of the best for reducing the waist. You will know that you are performing it with ease and correctness when you can do it ten times in succession and feel no lameness or soreness afterward in the trunk muscles.

Letters From Evening World Readers Following Miss Furlong's Lessons.

MABEL M. writes: "I have followed your advice and learned to play tennis and find it has been very beneficial as well as a great deal of pleasure. At first my upper arms and the calves of my legs were stiff and sore for days and I knew that was a sure sign that I needed this exercise for just these muscles. Most all of the heavy fat has disappeared from my shoulders and my legs are considerably smaller and the flesh hard and solid. I want you to tell your readers what I have written to you as I appreciate so much what your advice is doing for those who are following it."

A. A. L. writes: "Tell me through your valuable column how to gain weight. I am five feet seven inches tall and weigh only one hundred and twenty-five pounds. I know this is not sufficient. What should I weight?"

The exercises and diet for developing appeared the entire week of July 19 (six days). Send ten cents to me and I will mail them to you. You should weigh one hundred and fifty pounds.

A GOOD SHAMPOO. L. E. T. asks: "Will you please publish a good shampoo and tonic for a very oily scalp and thick dandruff? I am a blond."

Wet the hair with spray and then shampoo until clean with the following mixture:

Two raw eggs and two tablespoons of lime water mixed. Do not use soap. Oily scalp should not be massaged nor brushed. Below is a simple and effective formula for the oily condition of the scalp.

Lavender water, 3 oz.
Glycerine, one-half oz.
Boric Acid, 1 tsp.
Mix well and apply to the scalp, not the hair.

S. W. asks: "Will anything reduce the waist line?" Swanning and body bending will reduce the waist.

M. K. asks: "Will alcohol and camphor benefit the chin?"

Either alcohol or alum solution will harden the bumpy chin and make the skin firm.

SARAH K. asks: "How can I overcome being round shouldered?"

Practice walking about your room with a book on your head. Almost any of the exercises will help you. Remember to stand correctly, with the chin up, shoulders back and abdomen in.

ARLINE H. asks: "Will clipping the eyebrows cause them to grow?"

Clipping the eyebrows will cause them. Brush them from the nose out with a soft, narrow brush and a little lanolin or vaseline.

MRS. T. A. P. writes: "What causes arched nose?"

Tight lacing, high, tight collars, indigestion, highly seasoned foods and alcohol cause a red nose. It is sometimes due to acidity, and if this is the case, take each morning before breakfast, and after meals, one-half glass of very hot water with one-half teaspoon of bicarbonate of soda. This will improve the condition as well as the digestion.

Cripple to Try Long Swim. Tommy Lang, a cripple, who says he walked from Atlanta, Ga., to New York, a distance of 1,200 miles, will try to swim from St. George, S. I., to the Battery to-morrow. Tommy arrived in New York last Wednesday bearing a message from Mayor Woodward of Atlanta to Mayor Mitchell. He was formerly a newsboy in this city and has been a cripple since early childhood.

CYMRIC CONVOYED FROM WAR ZONE BY DESTROYERS

Passengers of Arriving Liner Say They Saw a German U-Boat's Periscope.

LIFE BOATS READY

Warning Before Sailing That Submarines Were Lurking in the Danger Area.

Passengers and crew of the White Star liner Cymric asserted upon their arrival here to-day that the Cymric had been conveyed for thirty-six hours after leaving Liverpool, Aug. 11, by relays of British warships. Five in number, and that she had not been permitted to go unaccompanied until the war zone was been left behind. Several passengers said that the periscope of a submarine had been seen, but officers of the Cymric declined to discuss this assertion.

The Cymric took practically the same course as the Arabic, which also flew the White Star flag, on the latter's trip which ended Thursday morning with her destruction by a German submarine off the southern coast of Ireland. The Cymric carried 183 passengers, of whom 105 were in the steerage.

From the time of casting off till the war zone was cleared the passengers said, the Cymric sailed in momentary expectation of a death blow. When the steamer left her dock, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, the flag pole recently erected at the mouth of the Mersey where all outgoing vessels could not fail to see it, displayed a black ball in warning that German submarines were lurking in nearby waters.

Before the Cymric was out of the Mersey's current, her sailors provisioned the lifeboats, adjusted them with new ropes and swung them outward. The passengers were assembled and places assigned to them in the boats, so that there might be no confusion in emergency. All this, the passengers said, was done in the Liverpool Harbor.

Clear of the harbor the Cymric sighted a small cruiser, formerly a private yacht. The cruiser's funnels began to blow black smoke and the little warship turned her nose toward the west. She steamed silently alongside, sometimes approaching as close as 200 yards, till nearly sunset, when the second relay, a fast vessel of the torpedo destroyer type, was sighted ahead, apparently awaiting the Cymric's arrival in her zone.

The cruiser then dropped behind and the destroyer took her place. The passengers watched her till they could see her no more in the darkness. Then they went below. All lights except candles were extinguished and every porthole was blanketed. The passengers slept that night with life belts at their hands.

All next day the convoy was continued. Four destroyers passed the ship from one to another, each warship apparently patrolling a certain zone and acting as the liner's escort through her patrol. The destroyers, according to the Cymric passengers, darted back and forth around the ship, circling her frequently.

Some time during the night of Aug. 12 the destroyers ceased their soliloquy over the liner and dropped astern. When day came the convoy was not to be seen and the Cymric's officers told the passengers that the liner was safely out of the war zone. F. C. Springer, of New York, told the alleged discovery by British authorities of a plot to poison respirators purchased for use of the troops in the trenches against chlorine gas.

"When the use of poison gas was first begun on the western battle front," he said, "the Government called upon factories for rubber respirators. Suddenly, however, all these contracts were cancelled. Then it became known that Government chemists had found that the sponge attachment had been impregnated with poison. They were destroyed, and now they are manufactured only under Government supervision."

Mr. Springer also has been in Italy on this trip.

"I found there one of the best military organizations in all the countries at war," he added, "Italy has over 1,500,000 troops on the battle line, equipped and provided with all that is modern. There are being mobilized for war, with complete aerial service, to bring Italy's forces up to 4,000,000 men."

MR. BILLING'S BODY HOME.

World Man Killed in Colorado Will Be Buried Tuesday.

The body of Arthur Billing, formerly a private secretary of the late Joseph Pulitzer, more recently an assistant business manager of The New York World, arrived here over the Pennsylvania Railroad last night. Mr. Billing, highly esteemed by his associates, was killed in a motor car accident at Estes Park, Col., on Aug. 13.

Mr. Billing's body was placed in the Stephen Merritt mortuary chapel, No. 241 West Twenty-third Street. There it will rest until next Tuesday, Aug. 24, when, at 11:30 A. M., funeral services will be held at the Church of the Transfiguration, "The Little Church Around the Corner," Twenty-ninth Street and Fifth Avenue. The interment will be in Woodlawn Cemetery.

ALMA GLUCK WILL SING ONLY TO HER NEW BABY

Grand Opera Star, Wife of Efrem Zimbalist, is Mother of Girl.

Alma Gluck, grand opera soprano and the wife of Efrem Zimbalist, Russian violinist, is the mother of a fine baby girl, according to a message to-day from Lake George, where Mrs. Gluck and Zimbalist are spending the summer. The baby was born last night, and the prima donna will not be heard in grand opera or on the concert stage during the coming season. She will occupy her time singing exclusively to her baby.

Alma Gluck is one of the few grand opera singers who boasts she got her musical education in the United States. Eleven years ago she was a stenographer in New York. She left her position to wed Bernard Gluck, an insurance man. Then she went into grand opera and became a Metropolitan star. She and Gluck were divorced and last June she was married to Zimbalist in London.

CAST IRON ABDOMEN SAVES LIFE OF PRINTER

Bullet Tears Through His Clothes and Only Bruises His Skin.

If the story Peter Griffo tells the police is true, he must have an abdomen of natural armor plate. He says he went to the building at No. 30 East Fourth Street this morning to talk with a friend who runs the elevator there. While he was waiting in front of the building he says a short, heavy man, whom he had never seen before, walked up to him and fired a revolver bullet at his stomach from a distance of about twelve inches.

Griffo's clothing has a bullet hole through it at the point indicated, and when Patrolman Brady of the Mercer Street Station called Dr. Hogen of St. Vincent's Hospital, the physician found the skin of the abdomen bruised where the victim said he was shot. Otherwise he was quite uninjured.

Griffo said he lived at No. 104 East Eleventh Street, was a printer by trade, and had been brought up in Father Drumgoole's Home at Lafayette and Great Jones Streets.

"CROSEY NOT TO RUN," STARTLING KINGS TALE

But Party Likely to Meet His Views on Candidates, and He Will Go on the Ticket.

Consternation was spread among Republican leaders in Kings to-day over a story to the effect that District Attorney Crosey will not be a candidate for re-election.

A conference immediately was arranged between the District Attorney and F. J. H. Kracke of the Republican Executive Committee. Later Mr. Kracke reported the substance of their talk at a hastily called meeting of the committee, which was adjourned until Monday to await a complete statement by the District Attorney.

But in his office Mr. Crosey said he had declined positively to run. Mr. Crosey's attitude has thrown a deep gloom over Republican leaders, who had hoped to see him head their ticket. His record in the Union Bank cases, the conviction of Edward M. Grout for perjury and the general record of his office for efficiency have made Mr. Crosey, Republican leaders think, the one man who can pull through their entire slate.

There is little doubt that a compromise will be reached between the District Attorney and the Republican leaders; that a slate will be adopted acceptable to him and that he will be his party's candidate.

YORKVILLE'S BIG OUTING.

Five Thousand Will Participate in Excursion on the Hudson.

The excursion of the members and friends of the East Side House Settlement will be held to-morrow. At 8:30 A. M. sharp a big steamer and barge loaded down with about 5,000 Yorkvilleites will leave the dock in East Eighty-sixth Street and go to Forest View on the Hudson.

The usual games will be held at the grove. A ball game between the married and single men of the settlement will be the feature of the athletic programme set up by Charles Carey, Director of Gymnastics. The proceeds of the affair, as usual, will be devoted to charitable work throughout Yorkville.

BRIDE, 18, DISAPPEARS ON HER HONEYMOON, MAY BE ON AUTO TOUR

Miss Stiff Weds Harper Lake and Bath Drop Out of Sight.

Mrs. Harper Lake, a bride of nineteen, has disappeared on her honeymoon without telling her relatives where she has gone and they are anxious about her, although friends say she is merely with her husband on an automobile tour of New England.

Until Thursday, Mrs. Lake was Miss Margaret Elaine Stiff, daughter of Clint Stiff, of McKinley, Tex., and granddaughter of the late Capt. Edward H. Stiff, known for many years as the "Cattle King" of Texas.

Mr. Lake of Lake Brothers, No. 18 William Street, cotton brokers, has been living at the Netherland Apartments. He is said to be forty-eight years old, and met his bride several years ago in Texas. She had been visiting her aunt, Mrs. L. L. Elliott of Texas and a cousin, Mrs. Winifred M. Shipley, at No. 40 Riverside Drive.

The wedding took place in the parsonage of the Forty-fourth Street Methodist Church, the Rev. Dr. Ernest Johnson officiating. Her relatives say she gave her age in obtaining a license as twenty-one and Mr. Lake gave his as thirty-one.

It is said when Miss Stiff told her relatives Mr. Lake had proposed, she advised the telegraph her father, in Texas, and he wired back for her to come home, and if there was a marriage, it would be there. The couple decided the long trip there and back was unnecessary and got married here. They will live, when they return from their honeymoon, at No. 240 West Eighty-sixth Street.

GRACE STRACHAN QUILTS EDUCATION ASSOCIATION

Defeated for Presidency of National Organization, She Charges Unfair Means Were Used.

OAKLAND, Cal., Aug. 21.—Miss Grace C. Strachan, District Superintendent of Schools in the Brooklyn section of Greater New York, has resigned from the National Education Association, following her defeat in a bitter contest for the presidency of the organization. Miss Strachan charges that her defeat was brought about by unfair means and factional dissimilarity.

"I have no regard for the National Education Association," said Miss Strachan in commenting upon her action. "I have sent in my resignation and it should be in the hands of the secretary by this time."

Delegates to the convention are discussing the question of whether Miss Strachan's action forecasts a split in the association. At a stormy session of the convention Miss Strachan vainly sought to address the delegates just before the election. She forced the question to a ballot and was defeated by a vote of 479 to 184. Dr. David H. Burton, President of the Winthrop Normal and Industrial College of Rock Hill, S. C., being elected President.

Miss Dyer, a Christian Scientist, died in Vineland some years ago, leaving a life interest in her estate to Mrs. Eliza Spencer, who also died about a year and a half ago. The entire estate, which originally amounted to only $20,000, will now under the terms of the will be used for the furtherance of metaphysical thought.
